The Auctioneer will not be deemed to have received the total sum due until after any cheque delivered by the buyer has been cleared. However a stroke of luck occurred for Lord and M.C.C. in 1812 when he discovered that the Regent's Canal was due to be built straight through his unloved cricket ground. - 105 J.E.H. 'Halford' Hooker. New South Wales One page handwritten airmail letter from Hooker to Bos (L.F. 'It was Xmas eve 1928 at the M.C.G..... with only 3 wickets in hand, we needed 320 runs, a seemingly impossible task. We spent a very cheerless Xmas Eve. Xmas Day was beautiful weather and it was the first time that 1st class cricket took place on Xmas day.... the scoreboard showed 9 for 113, when I joined him (Kippax). Little did we think that we should be partners for somewhere around 6 hours!.... tea adjournment, Kippax had moved to 160 odd, my score 22, 4 runs in 2 hours.... we took the score to 420 when I was out for 62..... perhaps my most cherished moment of that

- During the final Test at the Oval, Hutton survived an early scare when a bouncer from Ray Lindwall nearly knocked his cap onto his wickets, Hutton went on to score 82. In the five Tests played in the 1953 series, Hutton lost every toss of the coin*
- 604 'Recollections of Yorkshire Cricket'. Original four page handwritten manuscript recalling Yorkshire players and matches. Hutton talks of the Yorkshire team being 'a powerful side backed up by a number of good reserves who were good enough from most county sides', 'Bill Bowes was the man responsible more than any other for this success particularly during the first half of the thirties. Later he reduced his pace, but still remained, until the outbreak of war, the finest new ball bowler in England'. He talks of playing a match for Yorkshire v Derbyshire at Chesterfield, where it was discovered after two overs 'that the pitch was 24 yards long, the only time a first class match has been started and ended after two overs'.... Bowes opened the bowling and bowled a maiden over, Frank Smailes the other opening bowler bowled six long hops, five of which went for four runs'.... this illustrated the difference between the two bowler'. Hutton rates Lindwall and Bowes the most intelligent bowlers he faced or played with... 'we were never the same team with Bowes and Verity were away... 'One reserve bowler whom little is talked about today was Sandy Jaques, you could not see a better fast bowlers action than his. Unfortunately his legs would not stand six days a week cricket'. Hutton then goes onto describe playing cricket with his grandsons aged five and eight in the garden. 'Oliver the five year old was batting and hit the ball a firm blow into the bushes, whilst his elder brother and I searched for the ball, Oliver ran between the wickets with great speed calling out 21, 22, 23'.... 'until he reached 30 when we found the ball'. 'Whilst I was recovering on the garden seat a little later... he said 'Grandpa when you made 364 did you hit the ball onto the roof'...'I was at a loss for a reply'. Excellent cricket content. Date and purpose unknown. G - cricket £100/150
- 605 '100 Years of England v Australia Test Cricket'. Original one page typewritten manuscript possibly written to coincide with the Centenary Test at Lord's. Hutton opens with '100 Years of fighting for the Ashes, and it still survives, strong and healthy after many rumblings and minor tremors, the glorious uncertainty of the game marches on to its double century'. He goes onto talk of his admiration for Australia on her success, he talks of difficulties he encountered with the climate and environment 'The English plays different to the Australian and vice versa due to the conditions in which we learn the game'. 'To pull and cut is a dangerous stroke for the Englishman in Australia, the Australian batsman in England has no such problems', 'I would certainly say that I prefer to bat on an English Test wicket than I would on what I heard asa boy 'a shirt fronted' Australian pitch', He talks of knowing and playing with many of the games legends 'To see Bradman at close quarters was a revelation to me, his pull shot was a model of perfection, the Don was the perfect run making machine'. He talks of Grace, Peel, Hirst and Rhodes blazing the trail 'George said to me as a 15 or 16 year old... don't get like Victor Trumper'.... (he) was so superstitious that he made his life a misery!'. He concludes by mentioning the contribution of M.C.C. (Lord's) 'We here in England

- have been fortunate through the decades of having the M.C.C. at the helm, their wisdom I am sure has done much to further the game....'. Excellent cricket content. G - cricket £120/160
- 606 'Playing conditions'. Original one page handwritten manuscript, on J.H. Fenner & Co Ltd headed paper, seemingly part of an article about the playing conditions in England and Australia'. He talks of playing Larwood and Voce at Trent Bridge etc. 'In England it is more complicated. The difference in playing conditions in the two countries are considerable' I think playing on our own best wickets is easier than the equivalent in Australia'... the ball moves more in England, but on our Test wickets only occasionally do we find very much movement off the pitch. Selecting a team to play overseas.... is most complicated, I would go for youth in the batting and strength in the bowling to withstand the concrete like pitches encountered... 'I could never understand why Larwood played so little against Australia in England and Bill Voce never played. As a very young player I faced them two at Trent Bridge, it was a frightening experience. In those days I did not wear a thigh pad, early in my innings. Bill Voce hit me on my left thigh and in dark, wet wintery weather, I can still feel it today. Larwood and Voce, Lindwall and Miller I would have liked all four in my side'. Excellent cricket content. Date and purpose unknown. G - cricket £100/150
- 607 'Post War Cricket'. Three page typewritten manuscript, probably written sometime in early 1950 as there are references to the forthcoming West Indies series. Hutton talks of the post war state of Yorkshire, England and Australia cricket. 'For the past four years I have been fortunate enough to travel some 115,000 miles in search of cricket. To leave the shores of England with your cricket bag bound for distant lands gives you a feeling of unbounded happiness, only to be exceeded when the shores of our green and pleasant land came to sight, after months of sunshine and baked wickets'. He talks of being very fortunate to being born in Yorkshire and observes the effect of the war on Yorkshire cricket, struggle to rebuild the county eleven, 1949 saw the 'old Yorkshire spirit' return... the tide has turned. He then looks at the current Australia team with the 1950/51 tour of Australia coming up, with the Australian team on top since the war and puts it down to their 'spirit and enthusiasm in which they play. Their keenness is amazing...'. 'Let us take a leaf out of their book, if we can recapture that spirit of the Larwood and Jardine era, then our cricket will be back second to none'. He talks of Brian Close, Frank Lowson and Fred Trueman having that spirit. Hutton then turns to the West Indies series, 'The conditions here in England are very different to the West Indies. Our light is inferior to theirs, the result is the ball comes much slower through the air here than overseas. This will reduce the pace of their fast bowlers slightly, and fast bowlers they will bring...'. Purpose unknown. Excellent cricket content. Some wear to edges, good - cricket £140/180
- 608 'J.C. Laker'. Seven page handwritten manuscript commenting on the career of Jim Laker, probably written after Laker's death on the 23rd April 1986. Written on 'Cornhill Test Series' paper. Hutton talks of Laker learning his cricket in Bradford and as a middle order batsman receiving an invitation to the Yorkshire nets before the war. '...possessed in his right arm the skill that was to render the finest batsman in the world to the level of enthusiastic amateur'. He talks of Laker slipping through 'the very tight net of Yorkshire C.C.C.' 'In 1948 a very prominent member of Y.C.C.C. committee, asked me if Laker was happy with Surrey, I was asked if I could find out in a very discreet sort of way'. Laker was happy much to the committee members displeasure. 'What was the secret of Laker's success, he had the action coupled with the ability to spin and flight the ball. He possessed accuracy which great bowlers must have, his close to the wicket fielders were as safe as it is possible to be...', his casual manner was misleading, he was nervous very often when staring a Test match, but when he had overcome his emotional problems was a pleasure to play with and to captain'. Hutton talks of the 8 wickets for 2 runs in the Test trial, his 19 wickets against the Australians in the Old Trafford Test in 1956 and his bowling at the Oval to win the Ashes in 1953. 'I along with many other will miss Jim, but we will forever remember his great skill and companionship'. Excellent cricket content. G - cricket £100/150
- 609 'W.J. Edrich'. Five page handwritten manuscript commenting on the career of Bill Edrich, probably written after Edrich died on the 24th April 1986. Written on 'Cornhill Test Series' paper. Hutton talks of meeting and playing with Edrich over fifty years ago, both playing in their first Test matches together v the Australian's in the first Test of 1938 at Trent Bridge. Hutton and Compton making centuries, but Edrich with little success. 'in his 9th Test which was against South Africa in Durban in what became known as the timeless Test (1938/39), Bill made 200 which not only gave great joy to himself but to the rest of the team. Bill opened the batting and the bowling for England, he was a fast bowler...so fast that he broke my finger at Lords in 1938, the only fracture which I sustained on the cricket field'. I am unable to think of anyone who loved cricket and life more than W.J. Edrich'. Hutton talks of his War time service career in the R.A.F., 'his partnerships with Denis Compton for several years after the war gave immense pleasure to cricket lovers throughout England, I doubt if any two batsman have quite dominated an English season as they did in 1947...'. Although of short stature, Edrich played those great Australian fast bowler, Lindwall and Miller better than any other batsman of my time, his courage and sense of humour was of a very high order'. 'This has been a sad week for me, not only have two very great cricketers gone, but two friends whom I spent many happy hours...'. Both received some harsh treatment at the hands of selectors, I am pleased to say that these days we do seem to have selectors with more understanding of the problems of representative cricket'. Excellent cricket content. G £100/150

- 610 'Pre-War'. Four page handwritten manuscript for a speech possibly to an audience of Umpires. With mentions of tours to the West Indies (Yorkshire 1936) and South Africa (M.C.C. 1938/39) and his early life as a cricketer. Hutton talks of 'finding umpires from Sunday school cricket to Test cricket doing their job correctly and to the best of their ability...' he also points out 'I have known mistakes be made, they will continue to be made as long as this great game of ours is played'. 'I have known the great Don Bradman make mistakes and all the other great players, I myself I feel have made more mistakes than anyone else...'. He then talks of 'the happiest days were those I spent as a boy at Pudsey' joining the team, practising Monday to Friday evenings... 'we used to bat until we ere out... I well remember one week, I took strike on the Monday evening and I was still batting on the Friday, so I did not find the strain of batting 2.5 days at the Oval in 1938 too great'. He talks of his first match with the second eleven at Saltaire in 1928 at the age of twelve. Probably written just after Hutton's return from South Africa in 1939 and a good example of Hutton's pre-war handwriting. Excellent cricket content £100/150
- 611 'Opening the Innings and Batting in general'. Four page typewritten manuscript regarding batting, writing I believe to a younger audience. Hutton talks of the fascination opening the innings held for him, from being a small boy 'A new venture is being started as you walk out with your partner, a new pitch awaits you and of course a new ball so deadly in the hands of a good opening bowler'. He talks of the mental preparation before walking out to bat. checking your kit in in order, adequate protection against the hard new ball, gain information about the two opening bowlers. He talks of Hobbs and Sutcliffe and the variations of bowlers such as Bob Appleyard and Learie Constantine, 'It is your job to take the sting out of the opening bowlers and prepare the way for the lower order batsman who perhaps do not play so correctly as you'. He then talks of the grip on the bat and stance at the crease.
- Hutton then talks of his preparation prior to opening the innings for England against Australia 'Arriving at the ground we prepare to have a short knock in the nets, this is to loosen up and accustom to the light...' we pause to inspect the wicket... we try to determine what pace it might be..' 'The crowds are keyed up, the bowlers are keen to start the fray... even the umpires will be keyed up to 100% concentration and we the opening batsman will have a strange feeling of fear, a slight ache... which has come from nowhere, the result perhaps of the great ovation we have just received'. He then goes onto say that after the first ball, all the fears and aches disappear and tapping the ground on the block hole 'Instils a quiet supreme confidence'. He talks of the distracting silence as the bowler comes in to bowl the first ball and goes through all aspects of the early stages of the innings. Running the short single, backing up, metal note of the field placings etc. He finishes the piece by discussing net practise, hitting the ball late and in the middle of the bat'. Date and purpose unknown. Excellent cricket content. The back of the manuscript appears to have been signed by Hutton in pencil. G - cricket £100/150

- Rare account of the first tour of England. Belief in the natural superiority of English cricket was shattered by Australia's nine wicket win at Lord's over an M.C.C. club team which included W.G. Grace. 'The tour was ... a tremendous success, and it established in England a healthy respect for Australian cricket, especially in bowling, fielding and wicket-keeping, where Blackham made a big reputation. The only discord arose from the 'removal' of Midwinter and the claim that Grace and others were paid for their services ... The real pity is that there was no Test match' (Moyes, p. 175). It is from Reynolds specifically that we know the Australians wore blue and white caps and scarves, and looked 'uncommonly well' (see Moyes p. 171). Padwick 4968*

CRICKET CAPS, BLAZERS & ATTIRE

- 732 Sidney George Barnes. New South Wales & Australia 1936-1953. Australian dark green cloth test cap worn by Barnes during the famous series against England in 1948. The cap in good condition with no faults noted. A very rare cap from a iconic Test series. A signed letter of provenance accompanies the cap (details of which are printed below) - cricket £8000/12000

The cap was given to Alec Bedser by Sid Barnes at the end of the 5th Test played at the Oval in 1948, he in turn gave it to the vendor who was fifteen at the time, his father was a good friend of Bedser, together with the autographs of most of the members of the 1948 teams to add to his collection of cricket memorabilia. Various Australian Test cricket caps have been sold by auction houses over the years but only the 1948 touring caps of Don Bradman and Arthur Morris have been sold through public auction. The Bradman cap making $425,000 in 2003 and the Morris cap $40,000 in 2005 (source: The Baggy Green. M Fahey & M. Coward 2008). Plus this cap which was previously sold by Mullocks Auctioneers.

Sid Barnes played in thirteen Tests for Australia and scored 1072 runs at an average of 63.05 with a top score of 234 against England at Sydney 1946, Bradman also scored 234 in the match and Barnes commented 'It would'nt be right for someone to make more runs than Sir Donald Bradman'. Barnes was regarded as one of Australia's finest batsmen in the period immediately following the Second World War. On the resumption of Test cricket after the war, he was picked as the opening partner to Arthur Morris. Barnes was a key member of Bradman's Invincibles, the 1948 Australian team that toured England without losing a single match. Barnes and Morris shared century opening partnerships at Lord's and The Oval, where their 117 run stand dwarfed the 52 all out made by the entire England team.[63] In addition to his century at Lord's, Barnes made three other scores over 60 in the series. When fielding, Barnes stationed himself as close to the bat as possible at either forward short-leg or point. The report of the tour in the 1949 edition of Wisden Cricketers' Almanack, stated that Barnes's fielding was as important a factor as his batting in The Invincibles' success:

'Probably a number of batsmen were sufficiently affected by his

- close attendance to cause them to lose concentration on the bowler running up, but equally important was the fact that the knowledge of his presence influenced opponents to avoid strokes in that direction. The Barnes demeanour in the field illustrated the general purposefulness of the Australians'
- Len Hutton was quoted as saying 'Mr Barnes stood so close... I could hear his breathing.... due to the efficiency of Lindwall.... Barnes was as safe as a row of houses in this silly short leg position'. However, he received criticism for this approach and it resulted in him missing the fourth Test at Leeds through injury. In England's first innings of the third Test, he was hit in the ribs and had to be carried from the pitch by four policemen. The following day, he collapsed while practising in the nets, and when he went in to bat at number six, he collapsed again and had to retire hurt. After this, he was taken to hospital where he spent 10 days before rejoining the tour for the Derbyshire match that followed the fourth Test. Barnes thus played in four of the five Tests, missing the fourth Test through injury. He scored 329 runs in the Tests, averaging 82.25. In all first-class matches on the tour, he amassed 1354 runs, averaging 56.41.
