CRICKET MEMORABILIA

CRICKET EPHEMERA

- 366 'Vigoro Cricket', 'The People's Game'. c1908. A rare and unusual four page handbill comprising 'Rules, Score Sheet and Particulars of the New Game' for an exhibition match between Middlesex and Surrey, played at the Coliseum, Charing Cross, London. The handbill features photographs of games in progress. 'The special object of this new game is to provide the missing International quick game for the People's gatherings, and the advantages of it as a Health Exercise with its splendid short exciting runs and good humour will be found greater than any other. Without running, a game is practically useless, and people soon age or become stout who give up running games for slow ones'. The teams were made up of four players on each side, for Middlesex, A.E. Trott, E. Mignon, E. Hendren and T.J. Hearne, for Surrey, A. Marshall, W. Gooder, W. Davis and J.W. Hitch. Horizontal fold, otherwise G/VG - cricket £180/250
- 'Vigoro Cricket', a game that could be considered as a forerunner to indoor cricket, was invented by John George Grant of London, in which he attempted to amalgamate cricket with tennis. The game could be played with teams of four to twelve players, and there were both indoor and outdoor varieties. The original outdoor version comprised 'bats' shaped like tennis racquets and a light rubber ball weighing approximately twice that of a tennis ball. Each wicket comprised six stumps. Any shot played forward of the crease required the batsman to run creating a fast paced game. The match played at the Coliseum would have been played in an indoor arena, and may have been arranged to attempt to sell the concept to the cricket authorities at Lord's.*
- During World War I the game took hold in Australia, where there is a thriving women's game to this day*

Wenman and Mr Richard Mills of Benenden, against 'eleven chosen players of the Isle of Oxney'. 'The chances against the two enterprising players were great: the match having been made as follows: the two against the eleven in every point of the game, they having none to field, and their opponents being all in the field. And what was more particularly against them was that when one was out, both were out, thus in reality each had but one innings'. Remarkably, in the two innings match, the 'Two' beat the eleven by 66 runs. The handbill has been laid down to reinforcing page, with minor loss to page edges, ageing and folds. G.
