The Auctioneer may at his sole discretion determine the advance of bidding or refuse a bid, divide any lot, combine any two or more lots or withdraw any lot without prior notice.
7. The buyer shall pay the price at which a lot is knocked down by the Auctioneer to the buyer (the hammer price) together with a premium of 19% (plus V.A.T. @ 20%) of the hammer price, all of which are hereafter collectively referred to as 'the total sum due'. 14. Notwithstanding any other terms of these conditions, if within fourteen days of the sale the Auctioneer has received from the buyer of any lot notice in writing that in his view the lot is a deliberate forgery and within fourteen days after such notification the buyer returns the same to the Auctioneer in the same condition as at the time of the sale and satisfies the Auctioneer that considered in the light of the entry in the catalogue the lot is a deliberate forgery then the sale of the lot will be rescinded and the purchase price of the same refunded. In all other cases the Auctioneer will remit the proceeds of sale to the seller within seven days of the receipt by the Auctioneer of the total sum due. The Auctioneer will not be deemed to have received the total sum due until after any cheque delivered by the buyer has been cleared. In the event of the Auctioneer exercising his right to rescind the sale his obligation to the seller hereunder lapses.

- The 'Big Six' cricket dispute of 1912 was a confrontation between the administrators and players in Australia. Six of Australia's leading cricketers refused an invitation to tour England for the 1912 Triangular Tournament. The dispute was the culmination of a series of arguments that followed the establishment of the Australian Board of Control for International Cricket in 1905. The immediate cause of the dispute was the insistence by the players that they had the right to select the managers of Australian cricket teams touring overseas. However the dispute was a wider one, a power struggle over who would have access to the revenue these tours raised. The ramifications of the dispute were far-reaching and affected the destiny of Australian cricket over the ensuing decades.*

Harold Pinter CBE was a Nobel Prize winning English playwright, screen-writer, director and actor. One of the most influential modern British dramatists, his writing career spanned more than 50 years. He was a cricket enthusiast, taking his bat with him when evacuated during the Blitz. In 1971 he told Mel Gussow, 'one of my main obsessions in life is the game of cricket. I play and watch and read about it all the time'. He was a leading player and chairman of the Gaieties Cricket Club from 1972 to his death. He died in 2008 at the age of 78 years

Arthur Wellard (1902-1960) was a "Tour de Force of the Cricket world" in England. He played for Somerset, England and the Gaieties. He spent his final playing years keeping an avuncular eye on a wandering team of "keen but erratic Home Counties amateurs" called the Gaieties CC, founded 1937. He was its coach, critic, confessor and counsellor, and his advice was based on decades of survival in the upper echelons of first class cricket. He died on the 31st December 1980 at the age of 78 years.

LEONARD HUTTON CRICKET COLLECTION

- 789 'Australia v England 'The Ashes' 1982/83'. Original nine page handwritten manuscript on 'Royal Sydney Golf Course' headed paper covering aspects of the series being played in Australia, written by Len Hutton. He mentions particularly the fast bowlers and their tactics 'A long time ago when Larwood was the best and fastest bowler in the world they enlisted a Gentleman's agreement between fast bowlers that bouncers were for batsman only.... I have forgotten the number of times I have wished I could bowl fast, just to have that ability enables you to command an equal amount of respect, particularly from opening batsman and tail enders who might be slow bowlers'. 'But these modern times remind me of the Cole Porter song 'Anything Goes'. During the recent Brisbane Test, Cowans was given out caught behind from one of the most vicious short pitched deliveries I have seen for a long time. This was England's no 11 batsman'. 'During the recent Adelaide Test, Thomson, the premier fast bowler of both sides was given a few nasty short pitched deliveries much to his discomfort'. 'Gower in England's 2nd innings was on the receiving end.... from Hogg, only the helmet saved Gower from serious injury'. 'It is certainly a fast bowlers world at the moment, I can see a day when both Australia and England have fast bowlers of similar quality and the batsman will be dressed up like American Football players, what a depressing thought'. Hutton talks of the abundance of Australian spin bowlers in the past but the paucity in the modern era 'perhaps down to the LBW rule which is made for seam and fast bowlers'. 'Willis could have done little more with the bowlers at his command, but I will never understand Botham bowling bouncers, or Willis who does not possess the pace these days to worry good batsman on Australian wickets'. 'The Kookaburra is a fast bowlers ball perhaps a day will come when a spinners ball is produced and the game will be much more interesting to play and to watch'. Excellent cricket content. Date and purpose unknown but written sometime between 15th December 1982 and the 2nd January 1983. G - cricket £140/180

790 'Don Bradman'. Original and extensive fifteen page handwritten manuscript/article on the subject of Don Bradman, written by Len Hutton. 'In the spring of 1930, I found myself as a 14 year old schoolboy watching Yorkshire v the Australians at Bradford. The journey of some 5 miles from my native town of Pudsey was made with the purpose of seeing Don Bradman. I did see him, but very briefly, he was LBW to Emmott Robinson for one'. Over thirty years later I mentioned this innings to Don, and like a flash he replied, 'Yes, I remember I nicked it'. What a memory, what a batsman, what a remarkable man. The next time I saw Don Bradman he made 309 runs in one day against the might of England at Headingley, I was just passed my 14th Birthday and went along to the match with a man who had been unemployed for several years, the great depression was on in Yorkshire at that time'. Hutton talks of Bradman going 'on to make 334, a score which I was to exceed 8 years later at the Oval'. He then didn't see Bradman for 8 years until his debut at Trent Bridge in 1938. Hutton talks of speaking to Wilfred Rhodes who stated that 'Don was the best he ever bowled against', George Macaulay being hit for sixteen off four balls, Bradman batting on bad or rain affected wickets, his batting on the 1930 tour, his ability at any game 'for no matter what game he played he could have been a Champion at any of these games'. He talks of Bradman being born in the country, good climate, his confidence, his ability to hit the vacant places in the field, his footwork, his stance, his batting against Farnes in the Lord's Test of 1938 etc. 'He then talks of his record breaking innings at the Oval, (Bradman) stationed himself eight yards from me at silly mid off... until I reached 335, so before each ball I had a good look at Don.... when I passed his record score of 334, Don was the first to congratulate me, and he did so most generously, as indeed did the rest of his team'. Hutton then talks of Bradman's private and home life, his ability at Billiards, his moderate drinking, Bradman's love of playing in Yorkshire and the appreciative crowds there, his great captaincy qualities etc. Hutton finishes 'Australia can be proud of Don Bradman, any country would be proud to have produced him. Those of us who played against him and knew him will never forget him, his boyish enthusiasm stayed with him all the way, and his chirpy 'good day' was just the same when I last saw him'. Wonderful cricket content. Date and purpose unknown. Some handwritten alterations in Hutton's hand to manuscript. G £300/400

791 'A Personal Note'. Original three page handwritten manuscript written by Len Hutton and appears to be an introduction or forward for a book about cricket 'compiled with the idea of assisting young boys at Council Schools, Grammar Schools and our famous Public Schools to improve their own game'. 'I have been given the inspiration to write this book from my own personal experience'. Hutton talks of learning his cricket on 'concrete pitch, in a school playing ground with a tennis ball and wickets chalked on the wall. The wickets were twice the width of the regulation size and at least twelve inches higher so one had to cultivate defence if his stay at the wicket was long'. 'This is not a text book on cricket.... if you have no inherent cricket in you, books will not help you a great deal'. 'There is no royal road to success in cricket, the only way is by the sweat of one's brow, by concentration and enthusiasm'. 'I was twelve years of age when I made up my mind that someday I would play for Yorkshire... amidst the frost and snow of our long winters I would often scale the wall of our cricket ground and dream of those happy days in the sun.... stumps would be drawn when it was no longer possible to see very much of the ball. Out of the distance would come the voice of old George, the groundsman, inquiring in his squeaky voice, if we had any homes to go to'. Lovely cricket content. Date and purpose unknown but the hand writing appears to be from a youthful Hutton. G £100/150

792 'The Bradford Cricket League Jubilee 1953'. Original two page typewritten manuscript, on 'Kingsmead, Stanningley' (Hutton's personal) letterhead written by Len Hutton probably for a speech given at the 50th Anniversary of the Bradford League. 'Let us cast our minds back to those who started the Bradford Cricket League in an entirely different age to the one we know today.... The wonderful amount of administrative work by club officials and League representatives down the years, has built up a high tradition which has so many of you have upheld through many very difficult years'. 'Each Saturday afternoon they watch the local team and if you listen carefully you will hear many amusing remarks. I slipped into a League match one evening last Summer, a youngster was batting and I overheard a remark from a group of supporters which ran something like this... 'This lad will never mak a country man. He's been in 25 minutes and he's nobbut got 5'. G - cricket £70/100

793 'Sonny Ramadhin, Club cricket and Club cricketers'. Original three page typewritten manuscript written by Len Hutton on club cricket. 'In the present days when Test matches and first-class cricket reach headlines, radio and television, it is very often forgotten that the players whose names we hear on the radio, see in television are a very small percentage of those who help to uphold the traditions of our great game'. There are the Sunday School cricketers, so plentiful in the North, a class of cricket which I had early associations, the club cricketers of the South and the League cricketers of the North amongst whom I learnt my game. From the smoke-grimed towns of Yorkshire and Lancashire, thousands flock each Saturday afternoon to see their local teams. Lancashire have their professionals with world wide reputations, who week after week give remarkable exhibitions of cricketing genius. He talks of Sonny Ramadhin, following his success against England in 1950 on the West Indies tour, gaining a good contract with a Lancashire League club. 'The month of May 1951 was not a very encouraging one for Mr Ramadhin, the mystery bowler from Trinidad did not appear to give the once-per-week batsman, the problems he gave to Englands best in 1950. The bowler with the mysterious twist of his wrist at the moment of delivery, was hit far and wide, hard and often by the blacksmith's, the bakers and the clerks of Lancashire'. 'A local cricketer whom I had known many years, stopped me....I see Ramadhin's getting some stick in't Lancashire League, with the expression on his face and a tone in his voice suggesting what were ya doing last year'. Mr Ramadhin, when the sun began to shine, started his tricks and he finished with over 100 wickets heading the averages for the season'. Hutton then moves on to talk of the typical type of local hero cricketer 'His walk to the wicket is of confidence. Every three or four yards he gives his pads a crack with his bat. A buckle or strap from his pads are probably missing, this minor detail does not concern him any more than the bowlers reputation. He is quiet, determined, his conversation normally on instructional lines'...How lovable he is, a giver of pleasure to countless, a breaker of bowlers hearts and to be seen each Saturday afternoon on cricket grounds throughout the country'. Excellent cricket content. The manuscript probably written in 1951, purpose unknown. £150/250

794 'The Game of Cricket. Part 1. Batting by Len Hutton'. Original eleven page typewritten manuscript written by Len Hutton. The manuscript contains an introduction of Hutton's boyhood experiences 'the lesson I most want to pass on is that the game is far greater than the man and only one or two players in the long history of the game have come near to mastering it', advice on choosing the right bat, pads and gloves, playing with a straight bat, style, stance 'many Australians have adopted the Bradman stance at the wicket', grip 'I am convinced that the left hand must be the master in batting. In the first Test match against the West Indians last year I injured my right hand. But I was still able to defend my wicket and play a few shots with my left only because it was strong and because this grip of mine allowed the maximum use of it', playing forward, playing back 'Nearly all famous overseas batsman are back-foot players. Think of the Australians, Bradman, Ponsford and Woodfull, of the West Indian, Headley... they all try to watch the ball for as long as possible', forward play, defence, off drives 'For myself, I have always felt that the most beautiful strokes in cricket are those played to the off', on getting experience 'If pitches were uniform all the world over, how boring the game would be!' etc. Hutton talks of the spin bowlers Grimmett and O'Reilly in 1934. 'I became intrigued with the mastery (of the two bowlers) thinking to myself that any batsman who could show up well against spin stood an excellent chance of playing for England... I noticed that in the majority of LBW decisions given to them that the batsman had been playing back. That showed how many batsman must have been taking the back foot across the line between wicket and wicket in an endeavour to play a straight ball, and how the bat had been late because it had been forced to travel in an arc from the direction of gully. The knowledge of that discovery proved very useful to me'. Excellent cricket content. Date unknown. Some fraying, nicks and tears to page edges not affecting text. G - cricket £130/160

795 'Captaincy'. Six page typewritten manuscript on the subject of Captaincy, written by Len Hutton. He talks of the need for enthusiasm, initiative and ability, difficult task of captaining a losing side, knowledge and experience of wickets, watching players etc. 'I was fortunate ... to play alongside Hedley Verity and Bill Bowes... I know of no two bowlers who studied the art of bowling to the same degree... also fortunate to have Arthur Mitchell, the possessor of a fine cricket brain... these three together with.... Brian Sellers... were an irreplaceable combination the like of which may never be seen again in Yorkshire cricket'. 'The Captain must pay attention to the fact that winning at all cost, by unfair means, is very bad, and worse than losing. I have known players who by talking on the field, and trying to intimidate the umpires create a very bad feeling'. An intensive article on the subject. Date and purpose unknown. Excellent cricket content. £150/250

796 'Test series v South Africa 1955'. Six page typewritten manuscript/article for the News of the World Newspaper, dated 19th May 1955, on the forthcoming cricket season by Len Hutton. He talks of his hopes of being selected to lead England against South Africa 'If I am fortunate enough to be invited to lead England's cricket team against South Africa in the first Test at Nottingham a little over a fortnight hence, I will experience a special thrill'. To be picked as England's cricket captain is always a great honour but selection this time would carry extra significance as I have never skippered England against the Springboks'. If appointed he would skipper England for the 24th time and be one Test of equalling Bill woolfell record of 25 Tests as

Captain. He also talks of his ambition to help defend the Ashes next summer and take the M.C.C. side to South Africa in the following winter. Hutton talks of the inclement weather 'No wonder these Springboks are feeling the cold. They came to England from one of the finest summers in years. It was warm even by South African standards. Now the weather is cold, even by English standards!'. In the circumstances, to under estimate them would be the biggest mistake...'. He talks of some of the South Africans seeing snow for the first time when motoring from Nottingham to Cambridge, problems with wet soft pitches for both sides, going through the shot to early, of the M.C.C. players who toured Australia, only Vic Wilson has scored a century this season etc. Hutton discusses the South African Captain Jackie Cheetham in detail, remembers 'Jack asking for some batting tips.... in 1948/49. Little did I know then that the likable and enthusiastic young fellow in search of cricket knowledge would, one day, be leading his country ...against England'. He finishes the article with a few paragraphs on asking advice on the game and refers to Wilfred Rhodes, Maurice Tate etc. Also reference to conversations players have on the pitch, Colin Cowdrey's appetite, Cowdrey's willingness to learn, also Frank Tyson, Peter May and Brian Statham, Tony Lock 'always' seeking to improve his field placing for different batsman'. 'Those few players who think they know 'the lot' when they have been in the game merely a season or two are their own biggest enemies. Excellent cricket content. G £150/250

Hutton was not selected as Captain in 1955, his successor was Peter May. Hutton, due to mental and physical demands of the role, retired from regular first-class cricket during the 1955 season
